Subject: Final notice regarding abandoned house causing public health hazard, stray dog menace, and religious disturbance – Telugu Street, Osmania College Road, Kurnool

Respected Sir/Madam,

I am a permanent resident of House No. 6-67, Telugu Street, Osmania College Road, Kurnool – 518001. I am constrained to submit this complaint once again, as earlier written complaints have not resulted in any permanent remedial action.

There exists an abandoned and unsecured residential house in our street, left unattended for over five years. Due to broken doors and complete neglect by the owner, the premises have become an unauthorized garbage dumping site and a permanent shelter for stray dogs, resulting in severe public nuisance.

Serious and continuing violations observed:

1. Accumulated garbage has led to mosquito breeding, foul odor, and unhygienic surroundings, posing a direct public health risk.
2. The abandoned house is being used by stray dogs as a shelter, increasing aggression and disturbance.
3. Dogs regularly carry meat waste and bones from nearby chicken shops, store flesh, and scatter remains across the street.
4. During night hours, dogs bring non-vegetarian waste into the nearby temple premises, causing grave hurt to religious sentiments of residents who perform daily worship.
5. Stray dogs damage two-wheelers, defecate in front of houses, bark throughout the night, and make the street unsafe for children, senior citizens, and women.

While authorities state that dogs are vaccinated, vaccination alone does not address nuisance, safety risks, or religious disturbance.

Legal and constitutional concerns:

- Under Article 21 of the Constitution of India, citizens have the right to live with dignity in a clean, peaceful, and safe environment.
- Under Article 25, residents have the right to freely practice religion, which is being directly affected by repeated contamination of the temple premises.
- As per municipal sanitation and public nuisance regulations, property owners are responsible for securing and maintaining vacant premises, and the Municipal Corporation is duty-bound to abate health hazards and public nuisance.

We therefore demand the following actions:

- 1. Immediate inspection and clearance of the abandoned house and surrounding garbage.
- 2. I) Issuance of a statutory notice to the house owner to:
 - ii) Secure the property by fixing doors and boundaries
 - iii) Clean and maintain the premises permanently
- VI) Face penalties for continued negligence
- 3. Removal and relocation of stray dogs from Telugu Street to a designated shelter, ensuring they are not released back into the same locality.
- 4. Regular sanitation and monitoring of the street, especially the temple surroundings.
- 5. Written confirmation of action taken.

This letter may be treated as a final notice. In the absence of time-bound action, residents will be compelled to escalate the matter to the District Collector, State Municipal Administration Department, and appropriate legal forums, including public grievance and judicial remedies.

We request immediate intervention in the interest of public health, safety, and communal harmony.

Yours sincerely,

S. Sandeep
